

June 18, 2026

To Whom It May Concern:

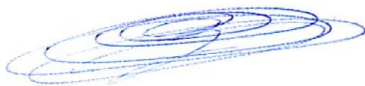

Colby Cadden was a student of mine in ECON 203, Principles of Macroeconomics, in the Spring 2026 term at the University of Calgary. Colby earned a final grade of A+, finishing the course at 99 percent.

This result rested on consistent performance across every component of the course rather than a single strong showing: 96 and 98 percent on the two midterm examinations, 97 percent on the term assessment work, and 99 percent on the cumulative final examination. Marks of this calibre, sustained from the first assessment through to the last, reflect both a genuine command of the material and steady, disciplined effort across the entire term.

In more than twenty years of university teaching, I have reserved the grade of A+ for only a small number of students. A performance as consistent and complete as Colby's is genuinely remarkable, and ranks among the very best I have seen in this course.

On the strength of this performance, I recommend Colby without reservation, and I would be glad to provide any further information.

Sincerely,

Lindsay Tedds

Professor, Department of Economics

Co-founder, Inclusieon (<http://inclusiecon.ca>)

Co-Director, Fair and Accountable Canadian Taxation (FACT)

Co-Director, Equity in Needs-Based Assistance for Better Lives and Engagement (ENGAGE)

Academic Lead, Marginal Value of Public Funds Partnership

University of Calgary

E: lindsay.tedds1@ucalgary.ca

www.lindsaytedds.ca